Monticello – Wayne County Interagency Council

[DIRECTORY & RESOURCE GUIDE]

THE MONTICELLO-WAYNE COUNTY INTERAGENCY COUNCIL MEETS THE 3rd TUESDAY OF EACH MONTH AT 12:00 Noon
AT EL CAZADOR RESTAURANT, August – May.

Mission Statement:
The Monticello Wayne County Interagency Council is a network of individuals, agencies, and organizations that support, facilitate, and share varied ideas along with information. Monticello-Wayne County Interagency Council is comprised of members who encourage each other to provide effective use of local resources.

(Historically, Monticello-Wayne County Interagency Council was founded in 1973 by a Roman Catholic Priest. “Father Knott” began the organization with the assistance of local volunteers who officiated as president on a rotating monthly basis. The president presided at the meeting where various speakers would present current and relevant information regarding welfare of residents of Wayne County. At times monthly meetings have been conducted through members telephoning one another, but the original format, changed only moderately, is still used today.)

Kentucky Appalachian Region

Leading Causes of Death

The Appalachian Region is composed of 51 counties in Southern and Eastern Kentucky. The region includes the following counties: Adair, Bath, Bell, Boyd, Breathitt, Carter, Casey, Clark, Clay, Clinton, Cumberland, Edmonson, Elliott, Estill, Fleming, Floyd, Garrard, Green, Greenup, Harlan, Hart, Jackson, Johnson, Knott, Knox, Laurel, Lawrence, Lee, Leslie, Letcher, Lewis, Lincoln, McCreary, Madison, Magoffin, Martin, Menifee, Monroe, Montgomery, Morgan, Owsley, Perry, Pike, Powell, Pulaski, Rockcastle, Rowan, Russell, Wayne, Whitley, and Wolfe.

This profile uses the most current data to assist Extension Agents in understanding the health status of their region. The accompanying page lists related regional data that may be helpful in directing programmatic efforts.

The overall age-adjusted death rate* in Kentucky is 970.5 people per 100,000. However, disparities exist across the Commonwealth in the number of deaths from various causes. To create this profile, death rates for select causes were compiled by region.

*Since each region has a different breakdown of age-groups, actual numbers of deaths cannot be compared. Thus, the numbers are adjusted for age to allow for comparison.

 Breast Cancer rates are based on BOTH men and women in the at risk population, so the rates may be lower than if women only were included in the rate denominator.

These data sheets were produced by the University of Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service, Health Education through Extension Leadership (HEEL) Program; 107 Erikson Hall, Lexington, KY 40506; 859-257-8900
Web Address: www.uky.edu/HEEL.

All data was generously compiled and calculated by Ashley Bostic. County regional designation determined by Appalachian Regional Commission. All age-adjusted rates were adjusted to the 2000 standard population. U.S., Kentucky, and regional age--adjusted rates were calculated from CDC WONDER mortality data. ICD--10 Codes were used to define each cause of death.

Educational programs of Kentucky Cooperative Extension serve all people regardless of race, color, age, sex, religion, disability, or national origin.

The development of the HEEL program was made possible by Senator Mitch McConnell with funds earmarked for the University of Kentucky, College of Agriculture, Lexington, KY and budgeted through the CERES-USDA Federal Administration.

This profile uses the most current data to assist Extension Agents in understanding indicators of the prevalence of child maltreatment in their counties. It should be understood that many instances of child maltreatment do not come to the attention of local or state authorities and are, therefore, not included in the data.

The average overall rate of substantiated cases of child maltreatment in Kentucky between 2003 and 2005 is 17.01 per 1,000 children under the age of 18. However, disparities exist across the Commonwealth in the number of substantiated child maltreatment cases. To create this profile, substantiated cases (according to the Kentucky Cabinet for Families and Children and Kids Count) of child physical and sexual abuse and child neglect are used as indicators of child maltreatment. These selected indicators are then compiled by county. Rates of each indicator are divided into five groups (quintiles). These quintiles are numbered 1 through 5, where counties in Quintile 5 have the highest rate of a specific indicator, while those in Quintile 1 have the lowest rate of that indicator.

CHILD MALTREATMENT

CAUTIONS:

These data are intended to assist the County Extension Agents in program planning. The profiles may also be used to help educate local communities about the rate of indicators of prevalence of child maltreatment in their home community. Because indicators of prevalence used to compile these data are limited to cases of maltreatment reported to and substantiated by the state children’s protective service agency, it does not include cases that were never reported. No one knows the actual prevalence of child maltreatment. There is much debate about which cases get reported. Some experts in the field believe that cases of child maltreatment in all segments of society are under reported. There has been a great deal of discussion in scientific literature about the lack of substantiated cases of child maltreatment in middle and upper income families and the high rate of substantiated cases in low income families. There is also some debate about the definition of “neglect.” For example: is it neglectful when parents over-involve their children in numerous out of home activities and spend less time with their children?

It is also difficult to say exactly what these data might mean. For example, if a county has a high rate of reported child maltreatment that could mean the county is vigilant in reporting or it could be that there is actually a high rate of maltreatment.

These data and debates might stimulate interesting and worthwhile discussions in the local community. However, when these data are used there should be a strong caution concerning the limitations of the data.

Domestic Violence*
Profile One

This profile uses the most current data to assist Extension Agents in understanding indicators of the prevalence of domestic violence in their county. It should be understood that many instances of domestic violence do not come to the attention of Adult Protective Services, the court system, domestic violence programs, or carefully crafted anonymous surveys and are, therefore, not counted in the data.

To create this profile, the following data was used as indicators of prevalence of domestic violence: the number of filings for domestic violence protection orders; the number of charges of assault/spouse abuse; the number of partner abuse cases reported to the county’s local Adult Protective Services (APS); and the number of adult resident admissions in domestic violence shelters. These selected indicators of prevalence are then compiled by county. Rates for each of these indicators are divided into five groups (quintiles). These quintiles are numbered 1 through 5, where counties in Quintile 5 have the highest rate for a specific indicator, while those in Quintile 1 have the lowest rate for that indicator.

*Some data sources track only spouse abuse-violence between a legally married couple. Other sources track violence between couples in relationships, married or unmarried. Some of these sources also track dating violence. The terms domestic violence, spouse abuse, and intimate partner violence are all seen in professional literature and are sometimes used interchangeably.

These data sheets were produced by the University of Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service, Health Education through Extension Leadership (HEEL) Program.

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE Profile One

CAUTIONS:

These data are intended to assist Extension agents in program planning. The profiles may also be used to help educate the local community about the rate of indicators of prevalence of domestic violence in their home community. Indicators of prevalence used to develop these profiles consist of: Kentucky State Police records of the number of protective orders issued; Administrative Office of the Courts reports of number of cases and charges for “assault 4th degree, spouse abuse”; the number of county resident admissions in domestic violence shelters; and the number of substantiated spouse abuse cases reported to the state Adult Protective Services (APS) agency.

It is impossible to report the actual number of domestic violence, spouse abuse and intimate partner violence occurrences. For many reasons, not all cases are reported to the police, the court, or Adult Protective Service. Data reported on this profile are also affected by differences in interpretation of incidents or differences in definition of terms. Most victims of domestic violence do not seek residence at or services from domestic violence shelters. However, those who do will usually receive counseling and court constructed or administered, may also fail to capture the “actual” numbers. It would not be unusual for victims of this kind of violence to be too intimidated, frightened, depressed, exhausted, or embarrassed to report incidents, seek assistance or even truthfully answer research questions. Some victims may be so geographically or socially isolated that they do not have an avenue to report incidents or seek assistance. Thus, these profiles are intended to be used with great respect for the limits of scientific inquiry. Agents are also encouraged to seek more local data that might serve as other indicators of prevalence of such violence.

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE*
PROFILE TWO

This profile uses the most current data to assist Extension Agents in understanding some of the indicators of prevalence of domestic violence in their counties. These data are intended to supplement other profiles on domestic violence developed by Extension. The format for presenting these data is used in order to remain consistent with other county profiles created by HEEL. In reviewing these profiles, please refer to the "cautions" discussed on the back about the appropriate use of these data. Data sources are also listed on the back.

To create this profile, the following data are used as indicators of prevalence of domestic violence: the estimated expectation of adult women in the county who may have experienced intimate partner violence at least once since the age of 18; the estimated expectation of adult women in the county who may have experienced intimate partner violence at least once in the 12 months prior to the 2002 survey completed by the Kentucky Intimate Partner Violence Surveillance Project; and the estimated number of domestic violence-related calls received through regional spouse abuse shelter crisis lines. Because these data were collected and reported by Area Development Districts or statewide random samples, the county data that was concluded by calculating estimates, rates, and quintiles are not useful. However, one could compare these supplemental data to the DOMESTIC VIOLENCE profiles to determine if the rate and quintile rankings are compatible. Approximately 37% of the women responding to the random sample survey reported that they had been abused, at least once, by an intimate partner since reaching adulthood. On the same survey, about 7 percent of these women reported that they had been abused by an intimate partner in the 12 months prior to the survey.

Rev. 6/2003
DOMESTIC VIOLENCE Profile Two

CAUTIONS:

These data are intended to help the County Extension Agents in program planning and should be used in conjunction with county profiles titled, "DOMESTIC VIOLENCE, Profile One."

There are many cautions to keep in mind when using these data to educate the public or assist in program planning. One reality that has to be accepted is that: WE WILL NEVER KNOW THE ACTUAL EXTENT OF DOMESTIC VIOLENCE. Given this reality, and because of the nature, complexity, and the risks associated with surveillance the data provided is reliable but most likely are underestimates of true prevalence. The use of data from telephone surveys of random sample populations carry with it cautions such as: the density of telephones (According to CDC 18% of Kentuckians do not have telephones.); access to telephone numbers is limited to land lines, thus excluding all cellular phones; with the same training for all interviewers there are still differences in the style and personal quality of interviews; in the survey there was a low response rate from African American and Latino women.

This profile does not reflect an exhaustive list of possible data sources. The decision was made not to use records from emergency rooms, in-patient hospital admissions, mental health centers or private physicians. There are also data in court and police records that were not used. There are several reasons for not using these available data including: vagueness of definitions, inconsistency in ways data were recorded, and concerns about the purpose of collecting the data (for example, some hospitals collect these data for billing purposes which may distort information about an incident and prevalence of an injury or condition.) The creation of county profiles requires county level data or data that can be estimated. Much of these data were compiled by district, region or state.

To find Facility in the United States
Using the Substance Abuse Treatment Facility Locator

http://findtreatment.samsha.gov

To locate the drug and alcohol abuse treatment programs nearest you, find your state on the map and click on the state.

Quick Search finds the substance abuse treatment facilities closest to the city, zip code, or street address you enter.

Detailed Search allows you to narrow your search by specifying facility characteristics from all of the Helpful Search Categories on Page 160.

List Search is an advanced feature that you can use to identify, print and download information on facilities by city, county, zip codes, States or Territories. (List Serve will also identify facilities based on all or part of a facility name.)
